Location

West Lulworth boasts some of the most dramatic geological features on the Jurassic coastline and arguably the most photographed locations in the UK. Lulworth Cove and Durdle Door sit at the heart of this area, and really are a must-see.

Lulworth Cove has many little cafés and beachside shacks serving local seafood, ice cream and other delights, as well as several restaurants and pubs from which to choose. The Lulworth Estate information centre offers an insight into how the Cove and Durdle Door were formed, and the Jurassic history of the region.

If you fancy a change from the Cove and cliff top walks, then Lulworth Castle is a short drive away and offers another glimpse at some more recent history, along with Tyneham Village and Corfe Castle.
